

Bosch announces global system integration partnership with HCL Technologies

May 29, 2013

- ▶ Strategic business relationship to accelerate software solutions delivery and reduce time-to-market across multiple industries

CHICAGO, Illinois; SUNNYVALE, California - Bosch Software Innovations, the software and systems division of the Bosch Group, today announced a global strategic business relationship with HCL Technologies. The partnership aims to accelerate delivery of innovative and scalable software solutions and reduce time-to-market across multiple industries with a specific focus on High Technology and Manufacturing sectors. Bosch Software Innovations' advanced product portfolio and industry expertise along with HCL's global system integration capabilities will enable the two technology innovators to offer customized solutions and first class experience.

"In today's fast-paced world, companies must gain a competitive advantage by reducing time-to-market and leveraging innovative software solutions. With HCL's integration expertise and Bosch's proven software, we will be able to support our customers in achieving these advantages," says Klaus Hueftle, managing director at Bosch Software Innovations GmbH.

Vikram Duvvuri, Corporate Vice President and Global Head of Enterprise Transformation Services, HCL Technologies said, "Using Bosch's tools, we will be able to provide our customers and prospects with solutions that will result in improved productivity and lower net costs."

Bosch Software Innovations globally works with clients to address their business challenges and to redefine business processes. The company's core software products for Business Process Management and Business Rules have been globally implemented across multiple industries including Manufacturing, Finance, Healthcare, Insurance and Energy markets.
